SA, (i. e. So, pron.) An emphatic adjection, used with personal, and possessive pronouns, and verbs, and sometimes changing into " Se," when preceded by a small vowel. Its power is not equivalent to the English self, or own, or to the Latin -met, or ipse, being merely to restrict the meaning from general, to particular. Emphatica adjectio quædam pronominibus personalibus et possessivis, et verbis juncta, et in " Se," mutata, cum sequitur vocale e, vel i, in voce antecedente. Haud simile apud Latinos, Anglosve invenire possumus quo in lingua utravis illorum designari liceat, nisi quòd vox cui fit adjectio à sensu generali in specialem constringitur. 1. Joined to personal pronouns: cum pronominibus personalibus adhibetur. " Mi, Mi-se; Thu, Thu-sa; E, E-sa; I, I-se; Sibh, Sibh-se; Iad, Iad-sa. Mi-se; i. e. Mi-so. I here: ego hìc. Thu-sa, i. e. Thu-so. Thou here: tu hìc. 2. Used with possessive pronouns, when, instead of immediately following the pronoun; it is annexed to its corresponding substantive noun. Cum pronominibus possessivis, et sic adhibitum, conjungi gaudet non pronomini ipsi, sed nomini cui concordat pronomen. " Mo cheann-sa." My head: meum caput. " Ann an tigh m' Athar-sa tha ìomadh àite-còmhnuidh." Eòin. xiv. 2. In my father's house are many mansions. In domo mei patris sunt multæ habitationes. 3. Used with verbs: cum verbis adhibetur. " Mar biodh e mar sin, dh'innsinn-sa dhuibh." Eòin. xiv. 2. If it were not so, I would have told you. Si non sic fuisset, edixissem vobis. The personal pronoun " Sinn," we: nos; and its corresponding possessive pronoun, " Ar," our: noster; instead of " Sa," or " Se," take " Na," et " Ne;" as also do verbs, in the first person plural. Sa and Se, are also often changed into San, q. vide.

'SA, 'S A', SA', contr. for Anns a', i. e. Anns, pref. et a', art. In the:

" 'S a' mhaduinn bidh iad mar am feur."
Salm. xc. 5.

In the morning they are as the grass. Manè sunt instar graminis. The two letters are commonly written, though improperly, in juxta-position.

* Toiseadrach, -aich, s. m. alias, Toscheoderach, Toseachderach, Thossederauch, Toschachderacy, &c. (Toiseach, et Dreuchd), A crowner, Mair of Fee, serjeant, or messenger: coronator, Marus Regis, serjandus, sive nuncius. "Primo, quod ille qui facit summonicionem nominet, in summonicione sua facienda, proprium suum nomen, cum nomine officii sui, et si fuerit Marus Domini Regis, vel Toseachderach [in MS. Cromart. Tossederauch] ipsius, vel aliquid aliud nomen officii pertinens ad summonicionem faciendam." Leg. Burg. MS. This term, evidently Gaelic, compounded of "Toiseach," precedence, and "Dreuchd," an office, occurs as the name of an office in our ancient laws, Reg. Maj. Lib. I. cap. 6. § 7. Lib. IV. cap. 3. § 3. Whatever was the nature of that office, various opinions regarding which are mentioned by Dr. Jamieson in his Dictionary, under this word; Skene, in his note on the first cited of the passages above, in his Latin edition of our ancient laws, mentions it to have been "Barbarum nomen priscis Scotis et Hybernis usitatum pro Serjando, vel serviente curiæ, qui literas citatorias mandat exsecutioni:"—while under the same word, in his work De Verborum Significatione, he mentions it as an office, or jurisdiction, "not unlike ane Bailliary," and adds, "specially in the Highlands and Isles." It is observable of this office, that such grants of it as had then been observed, were only known to have existed, either in the Highlands, or in districts where the Gaelic language is admitted to have been spoken. Two such grants had fallen under the observation of Skene himself: one, by David II. of the Toiseadrachship of the Earldom of Carrick, anciently a part of Galloway, where the Gaelic tongue long subsisted, noticed in his note on the first cited passage of the Reg. Maj.; the other, of the Toiseadrachship of Kintyre, dated 9th March, 1554. and noted in his treatise De Verb. Signif. A similar grant of the office for the district of Nithsdale is confirmed by a charter of Robert III., a district which Chalmers, in his Caledonia, Vol. iii. p. 60., adverting to that charter, observes, from its proximity to Galloway, to have early received an influx of Scoto-Irish settlers. Two other grants of this office, also in Highland districts, have been lately discovered, and put upon record: one by the Earl of Ross and Lord of the Isles, dated 20th April 1456, is of the Toiseadrachship of Lochaber; and another by the predecessor of the Dukes of Argyll, therein designed "Dominus de Loch-awe," of the Toiseadrachship of the district of Melford, and certain other lands, as therein particularly described. In this last, the remarkable permission, "prædas facere, vel guerras suffocare;" though seemingly a great concession of power, must be understood as merely signifying, to distrain for fees and amercements; and to summon the king's rebels to lay down their arms.

DICTIONARIUM

SCOTO-CELTICUM.

ANGLO-GAELIC.

A, 1. The indefinite article a, or an, in English, is marked generally in Gaelic merely by the absence of the definite article; as, I saw a man: chunnaic mi duine. But after substantive verbs, in all their moods, tenses and persons, there are placed before the substantive following them, the preposition "ann," in its contracted forms, with the possessive pronoun answering to the person of the verb: thus, "I was a father to the poor." "Bha mi a' m' athair do na bochdaibh." Placed before a participle, or participial noun: a', ag. He is a-coming: tha e a' teachd. He went a-hunting: chaidh e a shealg. 2. Denoting the proportion of one thing to another: am, an, art. 's a'. They had six arrows a-man: bha sè saighead an neach aca; or, bha sè saighead am fear aca.
